Community Services Acclaims Mrs. Doyle As Citizen of Month

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, chairman of the Armed Services Hospitality Committee, has been named UCS citizen of the month by the Executive Committee of United Community Services.

Mrs. Doyle, who lives at 5500 Thirty-third street N.W., is the wife of the dean of Columbian College, George Washington University.

"Her qualities of sound community leadership and steady devotion to the welfare of the people of Washington have been given unstintingly for over 22 years," Lee D. Butler, UCS president, said in announcing the award.

Mrs. Doyle, who resigned as president of the Board of Education in 1949, served 14 years in that capacity and as a member for 21 years.

The citation noted Mrs. Doyle's particular interest in handicapped children and her efforts in behalf of servicemen as chairman of the World War II Hospitality Committee and its present successor.

Mrs. Doyle also is vice chairman of the UCS Committee on Mentally Disturbed Children.

Mrs. Doyle, who came here in 1917 from her native town of Cambridge, Mass., is a graduate of Radcliffe College. She is the mother of three children, Henry Grattan Doyle, Jr., assistant director of the Reserve Officers' Association here; Robert C. Doyle, director of ABC television in New York, and Mrs. Charles Campbell, who now is with her husband in Heidelberg, Germany, where he is director of Amerika Haus.

Library to Be Dedicated To Interior's War Dead

A War Memorial Library and two marble tablets bearing the names of 221 Interior Department employees who gave their lives in the service of their country will be dedicated Wednesday by Secretary Chapman.

The tablets and library were purchased from funds voluntarily contributed by the employees as a result of an employee suggestion. The initial purchase of books for the library will consist of 500 volumes to be placed in a memorial alcove of the department library. Each volume will have a special bookplate.

Mrs. J. Atwood Maulding, director of personnel, will make the presentation on behalf of the employees. Jess Larson, General Services Administrator, and William E. Warne, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, also will take part in the exercises at 11 a.m. Former Secretary J. A. Krug, in whose administration the memorial idea was started by Lester W. Ganahl, will make the first gift of books.

Mr. Ganahl served in the Washington office of the Geological Survey when he suggested the memorial.

Music Piano and Viola Handled Finely In Bax Sonata

By Elena de Sayn

Arnold Bax's "Sonata in G Major," an imaginative piece of music beautifully played, was the piece de resistance in the sonata recital given by Norman Lamb, violinist, and Nancy Leachman Friant, pianist, in the Phillips Gallery yesterday afternoon.

The sonorous, rich quality of Mr. Lamb's tone was ideally suited to the melodious and romantic pages of the work. Its fantastic element, as in the "Allegro energico," called frequently on his equipment as a virtuoso, while the whole needed two interpreters to bring out its extraordinary loveliness.

That the artists did not spare themselves in the integration of their ensemble to a point of perfection was evident in their performance. It was not an easy matter to merge complex parts of such diverse character, to read between printed lines of the music and to bring out the gist. Together they created a tone-poem where emotional outlet vied with picturesqueness and poetry. The sombre, soulful song of the viola went often against stormy and glittery outbursts of the piano, the two joining in a kind of a rakish dance of underworld-like oddities in the second movement of the sonata.

Miss Friant is a talented young pianist. Her brilliant execution and artistic elan were needed to make the work characteristic and interesting. Her only shortcoming was a certain hardness of touch, especially conspicuous when the piano would draw the viola whether in Bax or in the first "Allegro" of Handel's "Sonata in G Major." Otherwise the latter was well done and showed the accomplishment of both artists in tone and nuance.
